 Official Paper for the County of Nye and the Town of Tonopah

WELFARE LEAGUE IS ALREADY ACTIVE

The first actual accomplishment of the Tonopah Welfare League, which was launched last night at a banquet given in Elks' hall, was brought about when the league, by an unanimous vote, adopted a resolution requesting the commissioners of Nye county, sitting as a town board, to give the chief of the fire department the authority to employ and discharge men. This is just a little increase as he might see fit, the league being subject to the desires and wishes of the commissioners.

This resolution will be presented to the commissioners, and that body will undoubtedly take cognizance of the request. F. F. Wittenberg, speaking for the commissioners, made it plain that he and his associates were willing to work in perfect accord with the people of this town, that the most interests of the community might be conserved.

For many years we have had a chief of the fire department who has virtually been without authority. The members of a department, believing that they were immune from discharge, have overruled the chief, and that body were ignored as the law suits. But there promises to be a change regarding management of the Tonopah fire department and the people will be able to rest assured that they are to be given proper protection in case of a conflagration such as visited this district last week. Organization of a volunteer fire department to co-operate with the paid department will undoubtedly become a reality within a very short time, and in view of the fact that there are a number of experienced fire fighters of early days still residing in this town, protection that is so essential will no doubt be forthcoming.

The chief of the paid department will be responsible to the commissioners, sitting as a town board, and to them alone. If he is found unable to cope with the situation, and not the man for the job by experience and training, then the services of someone will be secured who can and will fill the bill. If such a person cannot be found at home, then the services of a trained man from some outside city will be secured. Politics will be taken out of the Tonopah fire department once and for all time, and the man who becomes a member of the paid department must make good. He must prove that he is equal to any emergency, and he will be expected to take and follow orders as given by his chief. Discipline will be maintained and prompt service in case of an alarm being turned in will be forthcoming.

The recommendations made by the Tonopah Welfare League at its first meeting should be fruitful of results from this one source alone, but there are other matters of vital importance that will receive consideration, and the members will no doubt work in unity to improve conditions generally, prevent strife and discontent, propaganda being spread throughout this district and to make it plain to the wobbly that his presence here is undesirable and that the people will not tolerate any undue activities on the part of the wobbly.

HOW THE POLITICAL WIND IS BLOWING

An old lady—one of Uncle Sam's own—gave her "widow's mite" during the war to buy a Liberty bond. It pinched, but she was glad to do it. Later, there came several times when the wolf growled at the door and she almost had to have her money. But she managed somehow to get along without it.

The old lady's heart, however, went down, down, as she saw the value of her Liberty bond go down. In the financial depression and depreciation of everything, including credit, in which we found ourselves at the close of the democratic administration, even the old lady's faith in Uncle Sam almost depreciated. She had loaned him her money, believing he would pay her dollar for dollar. Imagine her thoughts when she saw the value of her Liberty bond dwindle lower and lower until it was worth only $85.

This was the situation when the democratic party turned the government over to the republicans. But presently times began to pick up, the wolf stopped howling about the door. Finally the old lady desired to visit her son and she sold her Liberty bond to make the journey. How much do you suppose she got for it? The hundred dollars and thirty cents.

Compare that with the $85 she would have gotten for it in democratic times. This is just a little increase as he might see fit, the league being subject to the desires and wishes of the commissioners.

HANDING THE WOMEN A LEMON

The democrats are "playing to the galleries" where the ladies sit. They are loud and vehement in calling attention to the nomination by their party of Mrs. Olesen of Minnesota, for the United States senate. They are loudest in the changes on Mrs. Olesen's nomination in an effort to make women believe the democrats are the only party which recognizes the woman in politics sufficiently well to give her a nomination of distinction.

Their constant thrumming upon the subject indicates that it is the only string upon which they have to play. Instead of emphasizing what they have done for women, the conspicuous isolation of this one instance, which they so persistently emphasize, only focuses attention upon what they have not done for women.

Furthermore, it is of more than passing significance that they selected a state in which they knew they had no hope of winning for the purpose of putting a woman on the ticket. Nominating someone to lead a forlorn hope in order to pay off a political debt owed that someone is a very old practice by some politicians. It would seem this was the situation with the democratic machine and Mrs. Olesen in Minnesota.

If the Democratic party wishes to show how much they think of women and how ardent they desire to elevate women to high office in the land, why did they not put up a woman for the senate in Mississippi, where she would have been certain of an election had she been nominated?

There are a great many states which are solidly democratic, where the nomination of a woman to congress or some high state position would be equivalent to an election. We search them in vain for any such exhibition of democratic chivalry. The democratic policy is to nominate women only where they know women can never be elected, but to reserve for the men all nominations where there is any chance of election.

From all we have heard of Mrs. Olesen, she is a splendid woman, of engaging personality and commanding talent. We regret she did not live in Mississippi or Alabama or Georgia, where she might really have had a chance to come to Washington and associate with a republican woman who is in congress, sent there from a republican district, Miss Alice Robertson of Oklahoma.

DEMOCRATS WHOLLY LOST POLITICALLY

The more or less "inspired" story going the rounds that the democratic party has decided to enter its efforts this year upon carrying several state elections, rather than the next congress, has a great many facts to give it substantiation.

The underlying fact is that the democratic party has nothing upon which they can go to the people in the approaching campaign and ask for a vote of confidence. The party has no program. It stands for no policy. Its leaders are at loggerheads. Its issue in 1920 was the league of nations; its leader was Woodrow Wilson.

Today the party is hopelessly split upon the issue of the league of nations. The victory of Senator Reed in Missouri was a terrible blow to the league of nations followers and an even worse blow to the Wilson faction. The fact that former Senator Vardaman of Mississippi received the highest number of votes in the state primary is another blow to the leadership of the Wilson crowd.

These facts have an evil meaning for democracy. The Wilson democrats are not good democrats in the sense that they are for the party first. They have always been distinguished by the advocacy and practice of the policy of "rule or ruin." Woodrow Wilson himself was the shining exemplar of this policy. No president in the history of the United States ever interfered so unjustifiably and so autocratically in the primaries of his party as did President Wilson. He and his clique still practice that policy. There is not the least doubt that they will knife Senator Reed in Missouri. There is not the least doubt that they will knife any other democrat who is nominated against their wishes. There is no sooner see the democratic party out the least doubt they would go to pieces than to see it succeed under a leadership other than their own.

The democratic minority in congress has developed no leadership. The democratic "leaders" in the senate are "wind-jammers." They are Tom Heflin, Pat Harrison and Tom Caraway, the political lightweight, all demagogues. They have no depth, no statesmanship and no quality of leadership. They are neither admired nor feared by their democratic associates. Their constant abuse and vilification on the floor of the senate has disgusted not only the substantial democrats in congress, but has disgusted upstanding democrats everywhere. Such democratic papers as the New York Times and the Baltimore Sun in the north and the Richmond Dispatch in the south have repeatedly deplored the fact that the democratic members of neither branch of congress have exhibited any symptoms of leadership, have formulated any policy or have shown any cause why the country should return the democrats to control of either branch of congress.

The democratic publicity reflects this low estate. It offers nothing constructive. It is broad-casting a lot of ridiculous assertions which have no foundation in fact. It is devoted largely to cheap abuse. It has been compelled to abandon a discussion of first one issue and then another because it had no facts with which to back up its assertion. Even upon the tariff, about which it is making the loudest noise, it is compelled to witness democratic senators voting for the protective schedules almost every roll call. It is common knowledge that Senator Ashurst of Arizona, Senator Jones of New Mexico and Senator Kendrick of Wyoming are making campaigns upon the fact that they have supported the legislative program put over by the republican congress.

The democratic organization in several states has sought to strengthen itself by making a shameful combination with the ragtag and bobtail elements, with the communists, socialists and others who advocate all sorts of dangerous doctrines. The result of this policy has been a net loss to the democratic ranks in the state where this sort of combination was engineered by the democratic leaders. It has driven from the democratic ranks the solid, substantial, law-abiding democrats and has not won the confidence or support of the radical elements.

CONFERENCE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The long anticipated report on unemployment and business cycles, prepared by the National Bureau of Economic Research, Inc., of New York, for the president's conference on unemployment, is now in the hands of the committee on the business cycle.

This report, on which a score of experts have been working for the past six months, contains a summary of practical experience in meeting the regularly recurring business depressions, and their attendant unemployment with which the country has been so often saddled in past years.

On the basis of the various phases of this report the committee has begun to draw up recommendations for mitigating the severity of the business cycle and for a tentative program towards carrying them into effect.

On Oct. 2 next the committee, consisting of Owen D. Young, chairman; Joseph H. DeFrees, Matthew Woll, Clarence Mott Woolley, Miss Mary Van Kleeck and Edward Eyrer Hunt, will meet again in Chicago. They will then act on the final draft of these recommendations in the hope of giving to business a working basis for co-operation. On Dec. 1 the report is to be published, with an introduction by Secretary Hoover.

In addition to this statement Mr. Hunt said: "I believe that this report will provide a basis on which American business may deal successfully with the evils of periodical depressions, and their burden of unemployment and business failures. So far we have had the finest kind of co-operation from industry and commerce, and the committee feels certain that with this support continued the country will yet see a solution of the very serious problem of periodic booms and slumps.

If the French don't drive a hard bargain they fear the Germans will do some driving.
